PI&Pg – Junior Designer

Place and Page is a community-centered graphic design studio based in Downtown Los Angeles that works with local organizations and public agencies on branding, events, signage, publications, illustrations, design interventions, community outreach, and more. We believe design has the power to change the way people navigate and interact with their communities, to create a more inclusive and equitable city. Place and page are two media that form the intersection of this work.

Job Description

Junior designer with 1-5 years experience with illustration, branding, or publication design work (recent design graduates ok also!) – will work collaboratively with the two other designers in our studio. Work can be a combination of remote and in-person in our studio. Projects include:

- visual identity design for non-profits
- branding and collateral for community events
- publication design...
- and more—depending on interest and skillset
- with the opportunity to see projects through from start to finish.

We are a small studio with a collaborative approach to working with each other and our clients. We love to work with anyone who can bring their own skillset and point of view to our process.

Please email resume and portfolio to:
